HOLLYWOOD MAKES HISTORY IN STAGING SHAKESPEARE'S FANTASY

These striking scenes from the new film version of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" are indicative of the spectacular and lavish scale on which the fantasy was staged. Max Reinhardt, famous European director, was brought over to supervise the production. Nijinska created the dance effects, and an all-star cast took the classic roles. The production has been hailed as marking a new milestone in Hollywood's history, and ushers in a series of film versions of Shakespeare.

At the left is Cardinal Seredi sprinkling the exterior of the Abbey Church with holy water, while at the right is a view of the interior during part of the six-hour ceremony. It has taken the monks of Downside fifty years to build the beautiful church.

The pit contained seven tons of oak logs and half a ton of charcoal, and when the temperature was 800 degrees Fahrenheit Kudu Bux walked barefoot across the pit and back again without sustaining any harm or burns. At the 19th Hole

Although not a total day for golf, quite a number of players were on the Richmond Hill golf course last Sunday. At times the wind nearly blew some of the players off their feet and spoiled many a good stroke.

The ladies in the two-ball mixed foursome often played from places on the course they had never seen before—their male partners with long drives seldom on the fairways, causing them plenty of grief at times.

The honors of the day went to Mr. W. H. Rogers and Mrs. Sinclair with the score of 113 for the eighteen holes—five strokes under their nearest rivals, whose score was tied by three other couples with 118.

The fairways were in fine shape and several long drives were registered, but the greens in some cases around the cups were bare and made it very uncertain in putting.

A. B. McMillan is getting back in shape and played two rounds and said that he never felt better.

GOLFERS TO HOLD DANCE

E. V. Bergin Outlines, Etc.

The old age pension at 60 years of age which is a plank in the Conservative party, Mr. Bergin said he thoroughly believed in, on the grounds that it would at least to a degree remove the fear of poverty in old age in thousands of cases.

The Canadian Farm Loan Act, now in operation, Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act, state control of railways and regulation of monopoly administration were among the many things the Conservative policy which Mr. Bergin stood ready to support and fight for.

He then took up the matter of prior spreads. He stated that he believed in the legislation recommended by the Price Spreads Commission. The administration of laws to protect the consumer, the thing which the Conservative candidate contended for.

He also declared that "relief, which is an insult to every Canadian, should be eliminated by legislation that will help people now on relief into active work at living wages."

Mr. Bergin then took up the Peace River situation. He stated that he believed in the construction of a highway from the Peace River to the capital city and from Grande Prairie to Edmonton via Sturgeon Lake. He also advocated the building of a heavy duty highway from Hines Creek to Peace River. He said that he was prepared to go to Ottawa and fight for these things, which he declared to be absolutely necessary in the development of this most fertile country.

The extension of rail facilities was next taken up by Mr. Bergin, who said that a branch line should be built into the Battle River country. He declared this productive country was being shifted for want of rail transportation.

It also favor the construction of the Peace River outlet as soon as monetary conditions make it possible.

Continuing, Mr. Bergin said that heavy-duty gravelled highways, that could be used later as a track for an electric railway, should be constructed," stated Mr. Bergin, who then went on to say that he was in favor of equalized tariff agreements between the United States and Canada.

Continuing, Mr. Bergin said that he stood for the enforcement of the Eight-Hour Day Act and for the enforcement of the Minimum Wage Act, with heavy penalties for all those employers who attempted to evade the law.

Mr. Bergin in referring to the leader of the Conservative party, said Mr. Bennett's voice is heard in clear ringing tones proclaiming the policies for future legislation that will enable him to carry on a wonderful program of reform that will place Canada in the forefront among the nations of the world. "His untiring zeal in the cause of his native Canada is positively amazing," declared Mr. Bergin.

In closing, the speaker said, if elected, he would go to Ottawa and fight for the policies and legislation outlined in his address—"policies that will place Canada as a whole and also the Peace River country."

MR. BERGIN AT RIO GRANDE

Mr. Bergin held an interesting meeting at Rio Grande, during which he dealt with the Conservative legislation of the Bennett government from 1930 to 1935, drawing attention to the accomplishments during that period. He further drew attention to the fact that the problems had not been met forcefully and valiantly in spite of the intense criticism of the various angles of the opposition.

PELLETIER AND J. O. STEWART ADDRESS McLENNAN MEETING

McLENNAN, Oct. 10. — Speaking before a crowd of over 125 people in the hall here on September 25, B. A. Pelletier, of Father, Social Credit candidate, assured political parties who held control in the past and who evaded monetary reform because they did not want it—so it was to their profit to carry on in the manner they have done in the past.

Mr. M. W. Macdonald, the chairman of the evening, spoke briefly on taxation laws and introduced Mr. J. O. Stewart of Wembley, who in turn introduced Mr. Pelletier.

Mr. Stewart, who did quite a lot of railroading in his younger days, said he felt well repaid for the time he had spent with the Social Credit group following his first interest in Social Credit four years ago, he had investigated many points for a solution and decided that credit by the state and for the state was the only one that would benefit everyone.

As a citizen of Peace River country since 1912 he was anxious to see a reform measure and could see no reason why 35 to 40 Social Credit members could not be elected in the federal election. "What would it do to our country and our railroad if we could use up everything on the shelves?" he asked. "People would have to produce more, and they would find a local market, without seeking an outlet for exports."

Pleased with the standing of Mr. Pelletier in the northern country, Mr. Pelletier said he thought much of him for speaking in his behalf without a grudge. Notwithstanding all abuse and ridicule he said, the people of the province, from north to south, had swept Social Credit into power. He hoped it would mean an awakening of people along lines of monetary reform.

He choice of the convention Mr. Pelletier hoped to be the choice of Peace River district. He had not intended to run in the federal election, he said, but people had asked him to work once more for Social Credit.

Editor of Vancouver Sun Wires Congratulations To J. P. McISAAC

Vancouver, B.C., October 7, 1935

Joe McIsaac, Sexsmith, Alta.

Congratulations on your fight for Coast Outlet. If elected you will win your fight, because in talking with Mackenzie King in Vancouver he seemed determined to put that outlet through regardless any opposition at James Street would again put up against him. You know, Joe, our heart is in that Peace River fight. Mr. Kennedy seemed to be a good fellow, but opposing the Liberal government as the crowd did, he seemed to make it impossible for Liberals to work with him. So, I wish you good luck and hope Peace River people will unite for an outlet and send you to Ottawa. Regards to all my friends.
